Introduction

The House Rules for the 112th Congress call for greater transparency and accessibility to legislative documents.

Specifically, two provisions were added to the rules by House Resolution 5:

Clause 3 of Rule XXIX provides that a measure or matter will have been considered as having been publicly “available” within the meaning of the rules if it was publicly available in electronic form at a location designated by the Committee on House Administration.

Clause 4(d)(1)(E) of Rule X directs the Committee on House Administration to establish and maintain standards for documents made available in electronic form by the House and its committees.

The intention of these two provisions is to ensure that Members and the public have easy access to bills, resolutions, and amendments considered in committee and by the House. According to Chairman Dreier’s statements before the House, “The standard for electronic documents is intended to evolve over time. While the standard may initially include more static formats such as a searchable PDF, the intention is to eventually transition to more flexible structured data formats, such as XML, as the tools become available to ease the creation and ensure the integrity of House documents. With respect to availability, the provision is intended to place electronic distribution on par with traditional printing; rather than entirely replace it. Finally, the rule contemplates a singular location that will direct Members and the public to the text of measures to be considered by the House and its committees.”²

The Speaker and House Leadership have directed the Clerk to create a centralized repository to provide access to documents that will be considered in committee and by the House. For 2011, the Committee on Rules is providing access to legislative text being considered by the House at <http://rules.house.gov/billsthisweek.aspx?NewsID=337>, and each committee is posting documents under consideration by the committee on their own websites. In 2012, the Office of the Clerk will maintain the site, <http://docs.house.gov> which will provide access to legislative text being considered by the House, and in 2013, the site will provide access to legislative text being considered by House committees.

Additionally, the Committee on House Administration, as directed by House rules³, has established standards⁴ for posting House and committee documents and data electronically. As part of the standards, the Office of the Clerk has been directed to, “...publish and maintain naming standards for each document [required to be posted online as outlined in the standards]”. These standards will facilitate automated searching and uploading of such documents. Files will be posted using permanent URL links. These links will facilitate outside and committee usage of these files. In addition, permanent URL links will allow archived committee web sites to maintain functionality⁵.” This document describes the naming standards for electronic files for congressional documents covered under the aforementioned standards adopted by the Committee on House Administration on December 16, 2011.

The goals in the naming conventions include:

- Reduce duplicate document names in the committee repository;
- Enable search and search engine capabilities;
- Allow the document’s name to be self-identifying.

Where possible, the naming standards follow existing naming conventions used by the Government Printing Office’s Federal Digital System (FDSys).

² Statements of House Committee on Rules chairman David Dreier, before the U.S. House of Representatives, Congressional Record, Jan. 5, 2011, pp. H7–H13.

³ H. Res 5, Rule X - clause 4 sec (d)(1) states that the Committee on House Administration shall— (E) establish and maintain standards for making documents publicly available in electronic form by the House and its committees.

Linking to documents on GPO or THOMAS

If a document has already been published and posted on GPO's FDSys System or the LOC's THOMAS system, it is acceptable and encouraged to link to these locations.

Identifying Members

Where it is necessary to have a member identifier in the file name, the Member's Biographical ID number or Bioguide ID should be used. The current Members and their Bioguide IDs are listed in the appendix. For former Members, see <http://bioguide.congress.gov>.

The benefits of using the Biographical ID number include having a unique identifier within and across Congresses, the Bioguide ID number is already in use by organizations in and outside of the Legislative Branch, and it avoids any duplicate document names due to duplicate or similar Member names.

Updates to the conventions

The conventions in this document will be updated when it is deemed necessary to add additional document types, add additional clarification to the naming conventions, or other circumstances.

Starting with version 1.2 of this document, changes and addition will be noted in an appropriate footnote.

Feedback

If your committee would like to provide feedback on the naming conventions and their use, contact the Committee on House Administration.

*Whether your committee uses the terms “Chairman’s Mark”, “Manager’s Amendment”, or “an Amendment in the Nature of the Substitute”, assign the amendment a number and use the above naming convention.

Some committees number their amendments using the amendment tree while others use a unique identifier unrelated to the amendment tree. The name convention provides for this flexibility.

Laid on Table in House	lth	This version is a bill or resolution as laid on the table which disposes of it immediately, finally, and adversely via a motion without a direct vote on its substance.	House Senate
Laid on Table in Senate	lts	This version was laid on the table in the Senate. See also Laid on Table in House.	Senate House
Ordered to be Printed House	oph	This version was ordered to be printed by the House. See also Ordered to be Printed Senate.	House
Ordered to be Printed Senate	ops	This version was ordered to be printed by the Senate. For example, in the 105th Congress S. 1173 was considered at length by the Senate, returned to the Senate calendar, ordered to be printed. Then its text was inserted into its companion House bill which was passed by the Senate.	Senate
Previous Action Vitiating	pav	This version is a bill or resolution as it was when an action previously taken on it was undone or invalidated. For example in the 102nd Congress for H.R. 2321 the Senate action discharging the Energy Committee and amending and passing the bill was vitiated by unanimous consent. The bill was amended, reported, and passed anew.	Senate House
Placed on Calendar House	pch	This version is a bill or resolution as placed on one of the five House calendars. It is eligible for floor consideration, but a place on a calendar does not guarantee consideration.	House Senate

Legislative Stage	Abbreviation	Definition	Chamber
Placed on Calendar Senate	pcs	This version is a bill or resolution as placed on one of the two Senate calendars. It is eligible for floor consideration, but a place on a calendar does not guarantee consideration.	Senate House
Public Print	pp	Any bill from the House or Senate may be issued as a public print. If a bill is issued as a Public Print more copies will be printed than are printed for an engrossed version. Public prints also number the amendments made by the last chamber to pass it. Public Prints are typically published by the Senate to show Senate amendments to House bills. They typically contain the text of a House bill, indicating portions struck, plus Senate amendments in italics. They are routinely ordered for appropriations bills, but the Senate occasionally by unanimous consent orders public prints of other significant bills.	Senate House
Printed as Passed	pap	This version is a public print of a bill as passed. Generally, appropriation bills receive a PP designation while non-appropriation bills receive a PAP designation. See also Public Print.	Senate House
Ordered to be Printed with House Amendment	pwah	This version shows Senate amendments to a House bill. It is similar to a Public Print from the Senate, except that it does not include portions struck, only the Senate amendment in the nature of a substitute in italics. See S. 1059 from the 106th Congress for an example of this bill version on a Senate bill.	House Senate
Referred with Amendments House	rah	This version was referred with amendments to the House.	House
Referred with Amendments Senate	ras	This version was referred with amendments to the Senate.	Senate
Reference Change House	rch	An alternate name for this bill version is Referred to Different or Additional House Committee. This version is a bill or resolution as re-referred to a different or additional House committee. It may have been discharged from the committee to which it was originally referred then referred to a different committee, referred to an additional committee sequentially, or reported by the original committee then referred to an additional committee. See S. 1016 for an example of this bill version on a Senate bill.	House Senate
